May 1968

To My Students:

Nine, ten, eleven, twelve years ago, has it been that long? Oh, I remember an incident or two from the first or second grade. But I remember people better --- the wonderful teachers I had, the best friend that I walked to school with or that sat next to me on the bus. Weren't those days great. Gee, if I could do it over . . . . if I had another chance.

Today things are a lot different. I am in high school and so much more is expected of me. My parents just do not really know what it is like for me --- how tough it is to be a teenager. But the days pass and six weeks is gone. Remember Christmas vacation? It was tough to come back to school and start in again. Boy, that seems like a long time ago! Next year I am going to do better in school, really make some good grades. You'll see! It is my last year, and I'm going to do everything that I missed doing these last three years.

It seems impossible to believe that I am actually graduating this year. Am I ready to assume the responsibilities expected of me? Boy, the things I would do if I were . . . . even a sophomore again. I don't suppose it would do any good to tell those "kids" to study harder, be in the plays, come out for every sport they can, work on the yearbook and paper staffs next year. They probably wouldn't believe that they would feel this way someday any more than I did when I was an underclassman. But this isn't the end. Commencement means to begin. Graduation is the beginning, the path leading to the main highway of life.

Sincerely,

Frank A Hayes Jr.

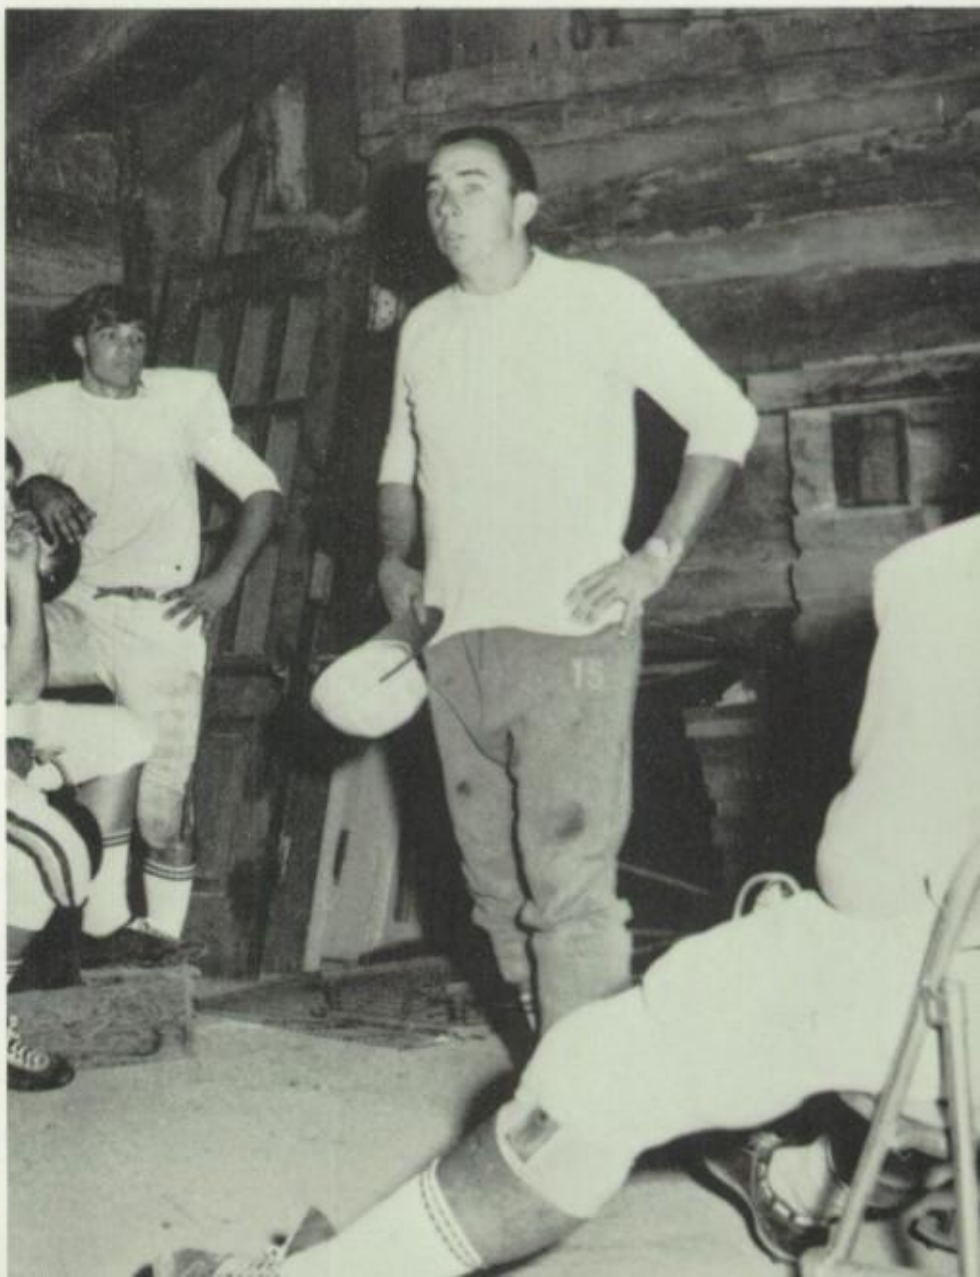
School Life

Another Year Starts And We Enter Expectantly

Spanish classes visit the graveyard in the Halloween season.

After the summer vacation, students use their free time to get reacquainted with friends and classmates.

Coach Will Cheesman gives gridders instructions before the second half of the game.



The 1968-69 school year came as no surprise to the Mitchell High School students after the summer vacation. All four grades were excited about the new school year, but freshmen were especially enthusiastic about the experience of high school life.

On the first day of school, students were wandering everywhere in search of their newly assigned classes. Freshmen were constantly asking upperclassmen for information concerning their teachers and classrooms, while upperclassmen waited leisurely for the first bell.

After finally receiving his class ring, Rick Snow pays the remaining fee.

The ordering of class rings is an occasion which all sophomores looked forward to for many years. With great anticipation, the sophomore awaited his junior year to receive the ring which he will keep as a lifelong memento of his school. In later years, he will be able to look into his ring's deep blue crystal and see reflections of times past. It will always be a proud symbol of MHS.

Receipt Of Class Rings Means, "I Am A Junior"

Illustrious Juniors Work Diligently To Make

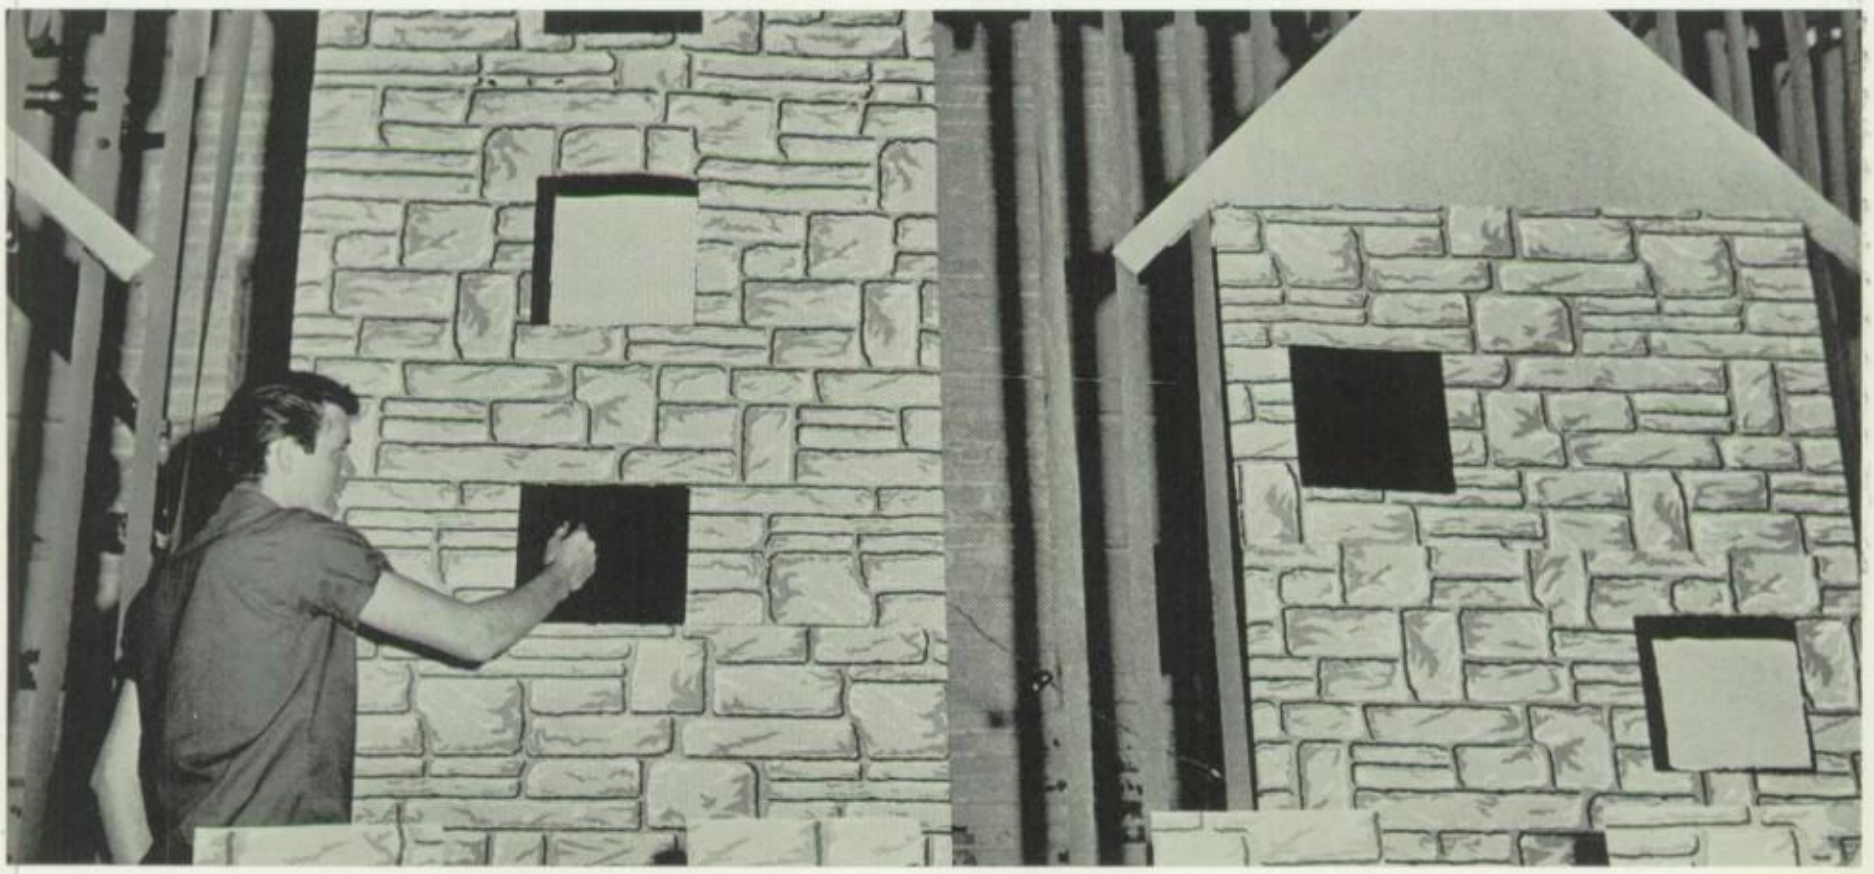
Windows are blackened by John Blanton for a gloomy effect.



Their Prom Better Than The Proms Of The Past

Hard-working juniors wait to see if the fountain they have just constructed will work.

After building castles, fountains, and shields, final touches are added to centerpieces.

Juniors And Seniors Travel Back Through Time

Juniors and Seniors enjoy a lively dance during an evening in "Camelot." Selections to please every taste were played by the Tell City Swing Orchestra.

The deserted gym is lonely before couples arrive for their enchanted evening in "Camelot."

The juniors who had labored so hard on the transformation of the M.H.S. gymnasium were well rewarded by the success of their efforts. As they and their senior guests stepped into "Camelot," their eyes met the view of a Medieval castle decorated for a festive ball. Music by the Tell City High School Swing Orchestra floated among the couples on the dance floor.

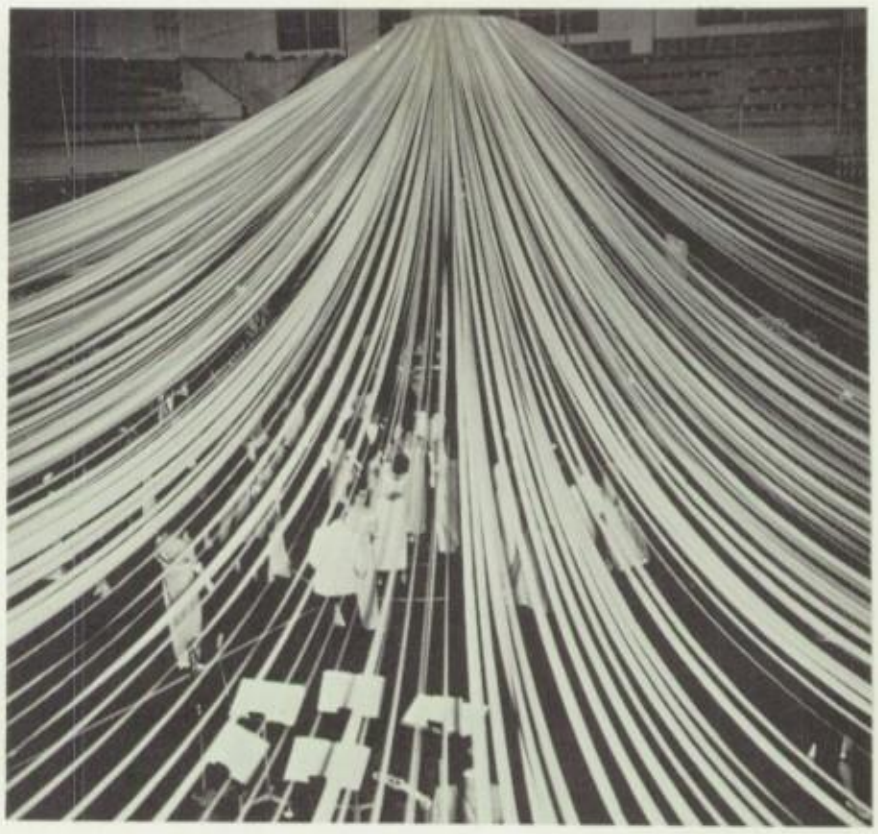
If the guests became hungry before the main entree was served, they could choose from many delicious finger foods beautifully arranged on the Round Table buffet. Throughout the evening, their every need was met by sophomores dressed in colorful court jester costumes.

Excitement mounted as Sir Arthur, portrayed by Mr. William Wright, prepared to make his entrance to the flourish of trumpets and wild applause.

The climax of the evening arrived when Vincent King and Janet Morris were crowned the 1968 Prom King and Queen.

To The Elegant Grace Of Enchanting "Camelot"

Junior class president, Phil Powell, crowns Vincent and Janet as prom king and queen.



Couples dance to beautiful music under the majestic canopy created by the Junior Class.

As the evening progresses, Junior class members and their senior guests are served from the "Round Table" buffet by sophomores working at the prom.

Pam Chastain, Football Homecoming Queen

1969 Basketball Homecoming Queens

For the first time in M. H. S. Homecoming history, two Athletic Sweethearts were chosen: Freshman Ruth Ann King and Sophomore Jan Worley. These two girls were crowned at the December 21 basketball game with North Daviess. Ruth Ann and Jan were chosen by the number of season tickets sold by their respective classes. The queens each received a tiara and a dozen long-stemmed red roses. Other candidates for the title were Beth Grissom, Junior; and Linda Isom, Senior.

Interests Of Mitchell's Students Range Widely

Parent Night gives the patrons of Mitchell High an opportunity to be students once again.

This year, the walls of Mitchell High School reflected the different personalities of the students. Happy times and sad times are all recorded eternally on the heavily structured walls. The building has heard the sounds of giant pep sessions and the screams of the political conventions which were held in the auditorium. The M.H.S. band had enhanced our halls with gay melodies and the chorus added its vocal touch. The various departments of M.H.S. have contributed highly to the appearance and upkeep of the school property making it a much better place for each student to spend his day.

Arthur Hirsch describes his winning science project to the sixth period physics class.

The halls of MHS fall silent after students leave for home.

Convocations Are The Hub Of M.H.S. Enrichment

Academics

Physical Education Endeavors To Coordinate The Body With The Mind

Miss Chastain prods freshmen girls to get the most from their warm-up exercises.

Throughout the United States, physical fitness is being stressed more and more. Responding to this nation-wide movement, Mitchell High School has required all incoming freshmen to enroll in Physical Education. Thus, both freshman girls and boys were provided with a wide variety of games, sports and calisthentics.

Under the direction of Miss Karon Chastain and her assistant, Debbie Kern, and Mr. Cheesman who was assisted by five senior boys: Steve Chastain, Steve Pless, Don Mann, Bill George, and Clifford Rhorer, P.E. classes took part in physical activities like basketball, soccer, volleyball, softball, and tumbling.

Socrates stated that a fit mind coincides with a fit body. This one hour a day also gave the freshmen an opportunity to meet and associate with other freshmen. Thus, they became better aware of their surroundings, their school, and their fellow classmates.

Most freshmen girls find a game of volleyball is a good way to build strong bodies.

Health & Safety Is The Path To A Happier Life

Since knowledge of the structure and function of the human body is necessary for everyone, M.H.S. required all sophomores to study a year of Health and Safety. Health offered the student some concepts of his body's structure and enough physiology to understand some of its functions. This study also gave students a valuable understanding of diseases. They learned the causes, types of prevention, and cures for various afflictions.

A section of safety was included in the year's study. In this phase of the class, students learned what steps to take in any type of accident. Treating shock, applying a tourniquet, and administering artificial respiration were just a few of the skills the sophomores acquired.

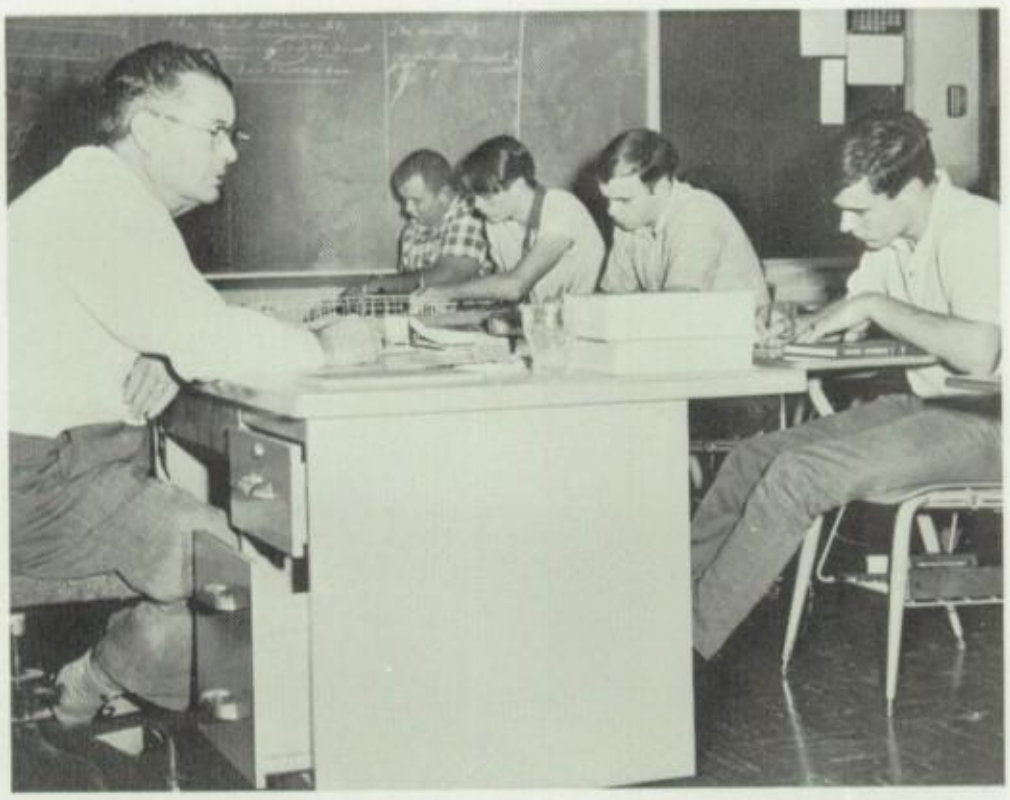
Approximately six weeks of the year were devoted to intensive classroom work in Driver's Education. In this length of time, students were taught the driving rules and regulations of Indiana. The actual driving experience will be obtained in a summer session.

Students emerged from the year's rigorous study with the knowledge and experience to guard their health and safety as well as that of others.

Mr. Snow contemplates a perceptive question asked by a student in his sixth period Health & Safety class before clarifying the misunderstanding which exists in the student's mind.

Mental illness discussions draw everyone's attention in Mr. Snow's Health & Safety class.

English Helps Students Build Their Vocabulary



Mr. William Wright, M.H.S. Senior English teacher, dictates words to his sixth period Standard English students during a weekly spelling test from the book of Word Studies.

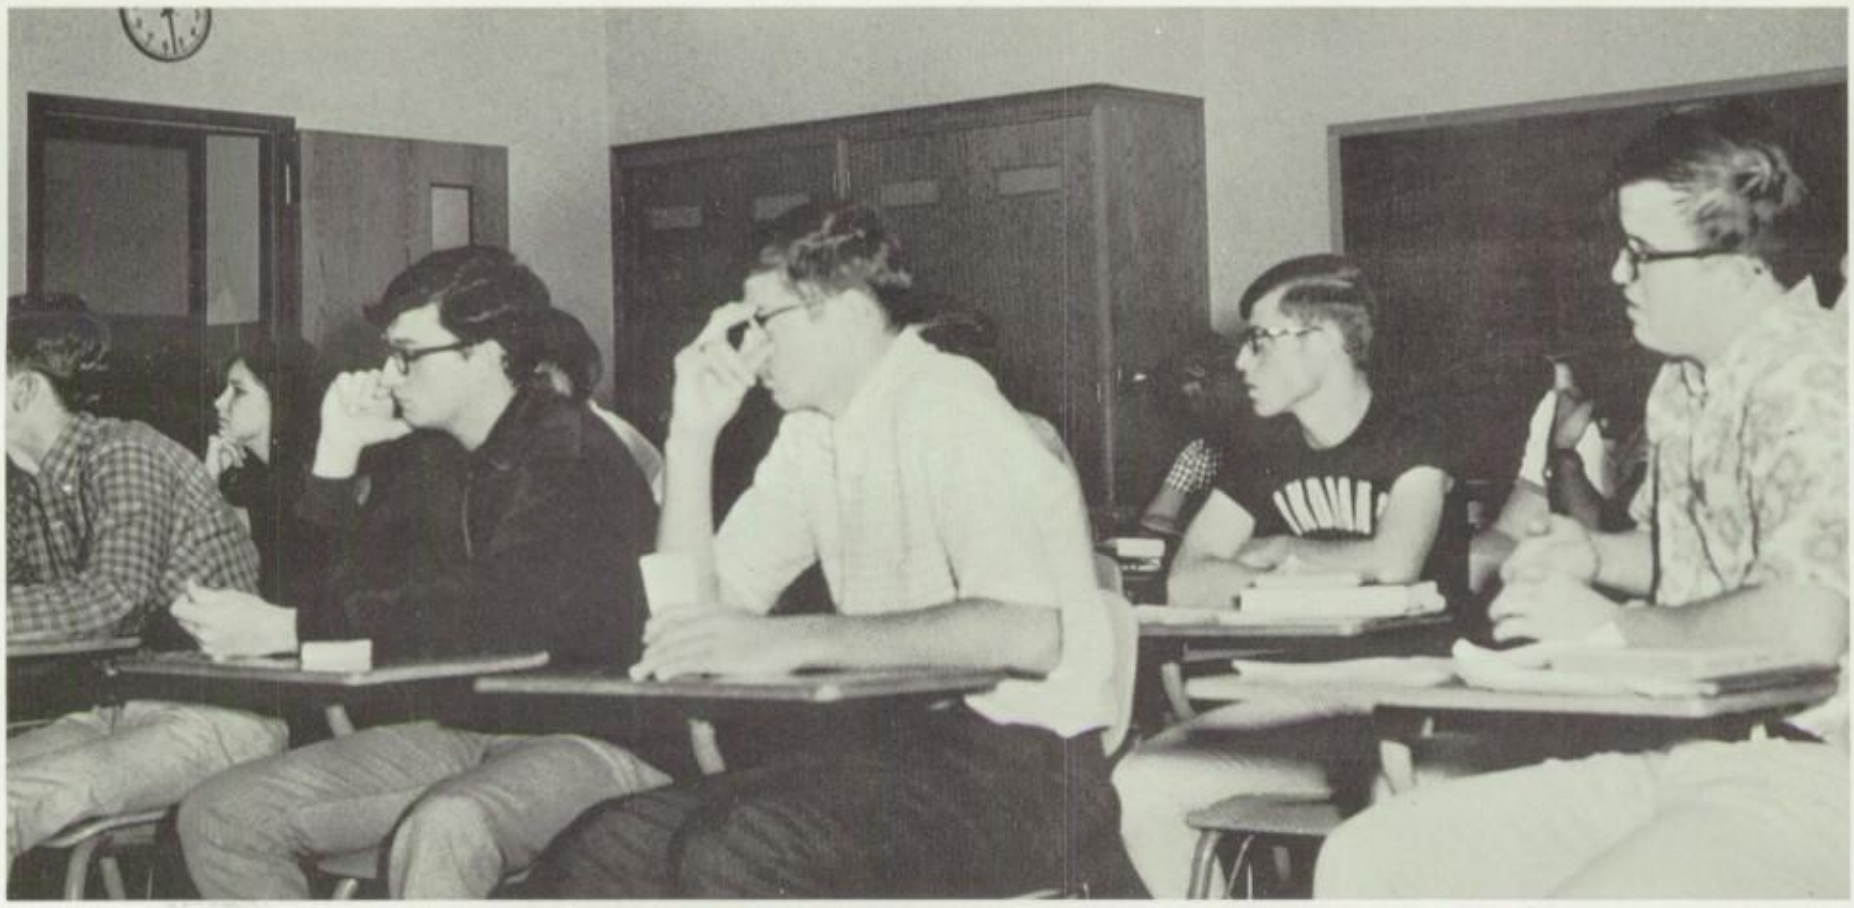
The M.H.S. English Department taught all students the basic skills of reading and writing that are so necessary in today's world.

To give the students more personal help with this task, the entire English Department underwent a reorganization in the fall. For the first time freshmen and sophomores were placed in class sections on the basis of past performances and teacher recommendations. This grouping allowed each student to improve his weakest skills in grammar and reading. Juniors selected one of two 11th grade English classes. Here the students were placed according to post high school plans as well as their performance in sophomore English. During the last year, seniors were given the opportunity to choose the English course which best suited their plans. They could select from five separate courses.

In Speech, as in English, the students began with basic fundamentals first. Students prepared various types of speeches to gain experiences in oral communication. The Mitchell High School Speech Department stressed the importance of conveying a message effectively and accurately. The climax of the speech year was a series of interesting debates.

After taking English and Speech, the M.H.S. students could express themselves more effectively.

Mr. Oswalt's Academic English classes take notes on the details of houses and foliage in preparation for their next essay.



Worldly events are discussed in the M.H.S. Speech Department. Topics may vary from contemporary politics to sex education. These interesting subjects help to develop better speakers.

Students prepared for presentation many types of speeches like the informative, the introduction, the farewell and the all-important persuasive speech.

While Speech Creates Confidence

Mrs. Parker listens attentively to John Dodds who is giving a persuasive speech in the fifth hour speech class. These speeches are graded according to their content and delivery.

Government Glorifies The Virtues Of Democracy

All seniors studied a semester of Government and a semester of Economics. Government students became better acquainted with our government and realized its value. The United States government was compared with various governments of the world, and its advantages and disadvantages were pointed out. First semester government classes conducted a mock election where students were urged to vote for their candidate on November 5. The Economics classes learned how this country's economic system works and saw their part in this system. The buying and selling of stocks was a major project of the Economics students. They became familiar with the many responsibilities of watching the stock market. Seniors came out of these classes with the knowledge needed to be better citizens of tomorrow as well as more effective contributors to our economy.

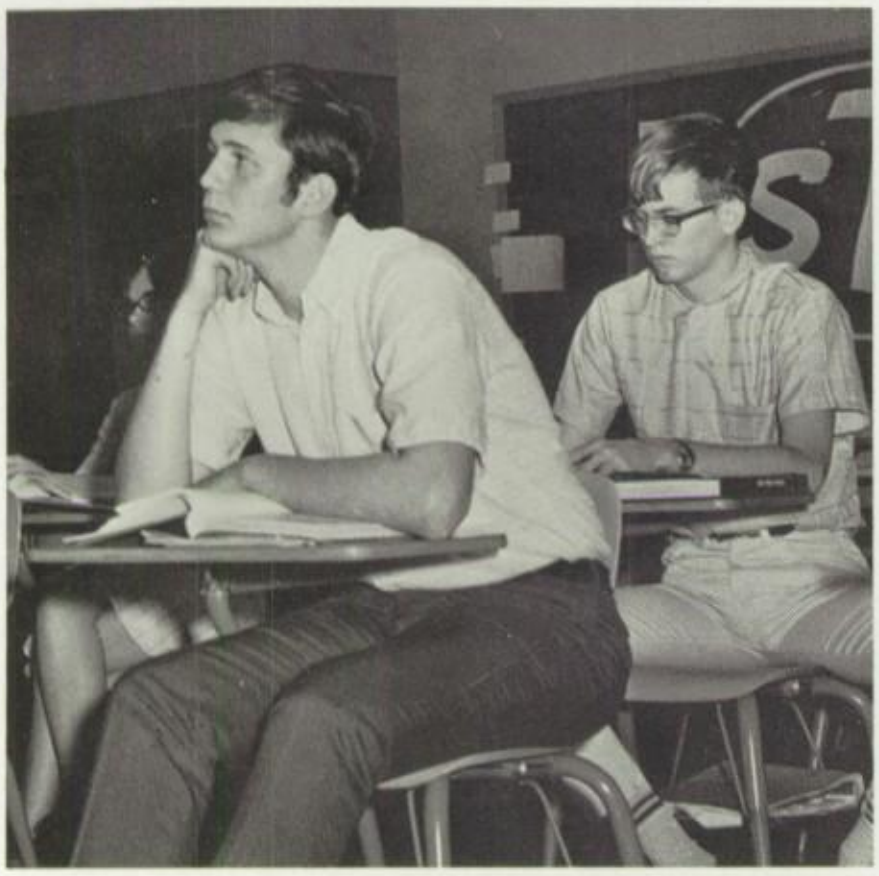
Jeanette Terrell awaits a registration check before she votes in the all-school election.

Martha Root takes part in campaign '68 by parading through the halls of M.H.S. wearing her party's button.

History Illuminates Our Mistakes Of The Past



World History gave sophomores a chance to study man from his humble beginnings to his complicated modern life. During their junior year, U.S. History students became familiar with our early government and how it has changed.

Two other courses, World Geography and Latin American History, were also offered to students. Latin American History introduced its students to the development of Central America from the Spanish Colonial Era to the present. This course also brought out the political and economical relationships between the United States and these countries. Those taking World Geography learned how a country is influenced by the geographical elements and how man can adapt to those changes.

Tim Smith daydreams as Greg Cornwell takes notes in preparation for the next test.

"Nixon's the one" posters are carried throughout the halls opposing the H.H.H. posters.

Students At M.H.S. Explore Foreign Languages

From the first class day, Spanish students began the fascinating task of learning to speak Espanol. At the end of this first year, most students had developed enough command of their adopted language to be able to say confidently, "I speak Spanish."

In second, third, and fourth years, students used the knowledge they had gained during their first year to study the literature, art and customs of Spanish speaking countries.

Latin classes studied the cultural contributions of the Romans during their first year, while the second and third year classes concentrated on Greek and Roman mythology. Through films and books of classical Greece and Rome, Mrs. Golda Knight, the instructor, helped the students learn more easily.

The study of Latin not only developed a Latin vocabulary, but increased the students' English vocabulary for a more effective use in their future.

Mrs. Golda Knight, M.H.S. Latin instructor, translates myths of ancient Rome and Greece into vernacular English while her first period Latin II and III class listen attentively.

Mrs. Golda Knight hands her attendance to Pam Chastain before she moves to the front of the room to begin her first period Latin III class.

Mrs. Cox assists third year Spanish student, Steve Thomas, with a difficult homework assignment.

Student Art Effectively Reflects School Life

Expressing emotions through art is one of the oldest ways in which man can tell others about his culture. It is a doorway of communication that everyone, regardless of race or nationality, can understand. This understanding is the way to uniting the people of the world in forming a more beautiful association with life.

In the art department of Mitchell High School, the young artist was taught the history and basic fundamentals that are so important in creating any kind of art. The students' many skills were shaped and molded to a fine point of perfection by the instructor, Mrs. Mable Davis. The artist could then develop his own ideas into the form of art that will perhaps become the guiding light of lives in the future.

The many applications of art by M.H.S. artists is ample reason to erase anyone's doubt of the ability contained in room 210 of Mitchell High School.

Gale Briscoe displays artistic talent as she creates a paper figurine in sixth period art class.

Patty Rasnic, Kathy Patton, and Steve McPherson show artistic ability in sculpturing.

Math And Science Students Live In A World Of

Modern technology has played an important part in creating new jobs for our growing population. These jobs require computational skills as well as basic ideas and concepts in many fields of science. Thus, students must receive sufficient background in these subjects before furthering their educations.

To meet this need, M.H.S. offered various courses in these subjects. In mathematics, the students studied unknowns, geometric theorems, and trigonometrical functions. The study of life and its environment was taken up in the beginning science classes. Advanced students studied the make-up, changes, and reactions of substances or had projects of their own.

Freshmen Biology students listen to Miss Osborne's detailed instructions before they begin their first biology-culture study project in her fourth period class.

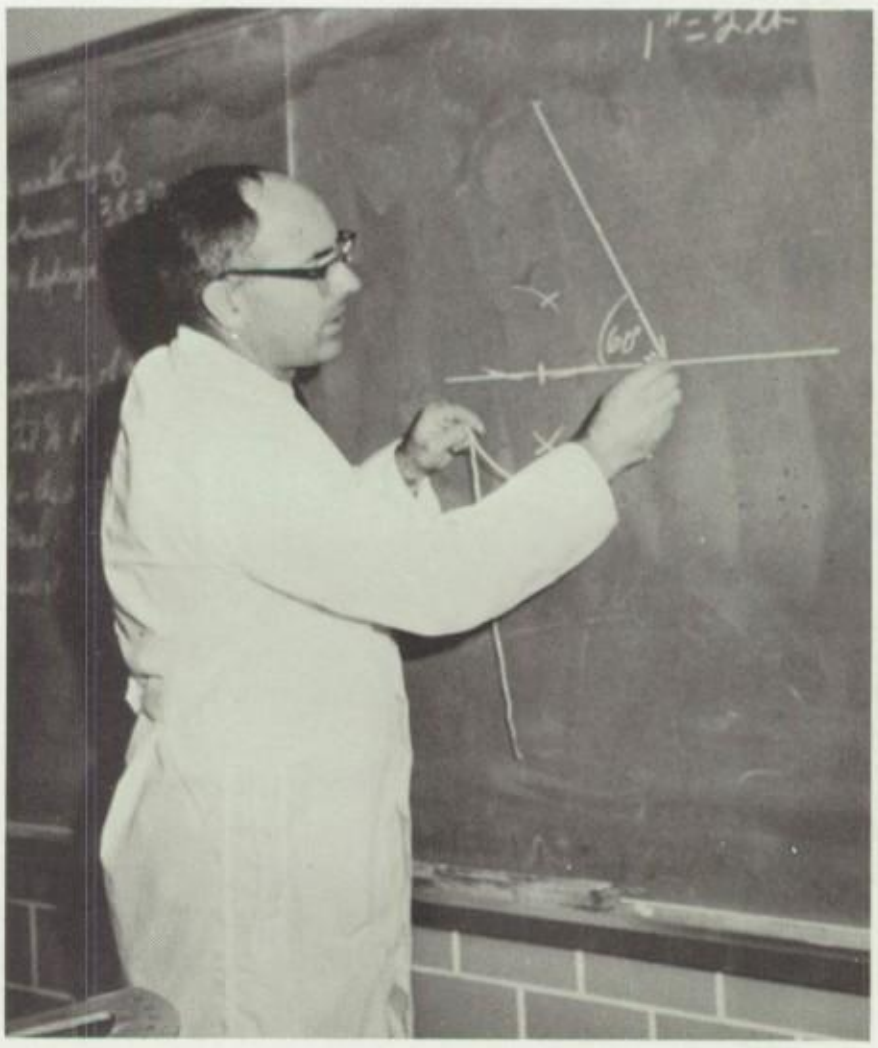
Students take notes while listening to Mrs. Doris Gardin, M.H.S. mathematics teacher, demonstrates how to work problems concerning sines, cosines, and tangents of triangles by using

Slide Rules, Formulas, And Elusive Molecules

Mr. William Huffman, M.H.S. math teacher, plans the next day's lesson while his second period trigonometry students labor on their assignments concerning trigonometric functions.

the overhead projector method in her second period Algebra I class. After these detailed instructions, she plans to give a test and assign problems for the next day's lesson.



Mr. Hollace Sherwood, M.H.S. Chemistry and Physics instructor, demonstrates the principles of vectors and vector quantities on the blackboard to his sixth period Physics class.

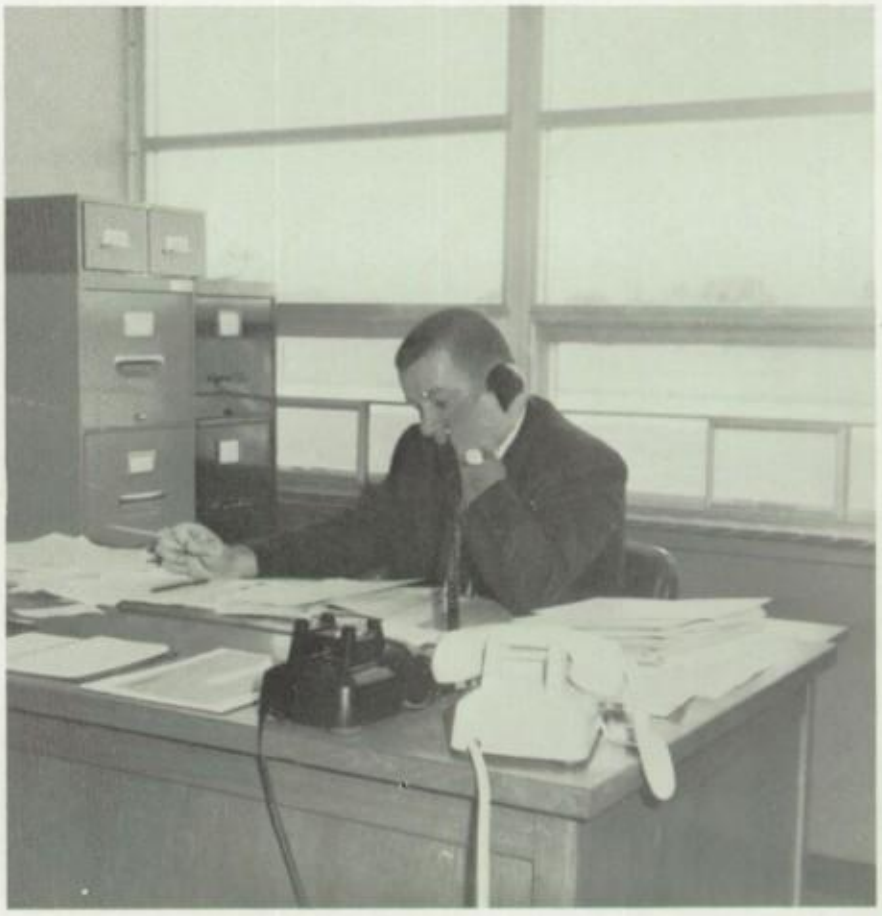
Guidance Encourages Expansion Of Our Minds

The major concern of the guidance program was to develop in all students a positive and realistic attitude about life, and to promote self-understanding.

In the guidance classes, many fields were covered. Each student observed his own behavior and the behavior of others around him. Physical and mental growth was studied to help students obtain a better understanding of themselves. Students were acquainted with subjects needed for college entry, and for preparation of their future life. By the end of the course, each student had been required to hand in a research paper covering a particular vocation or profession.

The Guidance Department had many other responsibilities besides their day-to-day classes. It was their duty to schedule classes and to give achievement, aptitude, scholastic, and I.Q. tests. Much time was also devoted to answering students' questions, and to helping solve problems. The guidance counselors assisted those seeking all types of careers.

Guidance has benefited the students in many ways. Each student should now have some idea of what he is going to do in the future. It is also hoped that each student has achieved a greater understanding of himself and the world around him.



Students Gain Experience While Cadet Teaching

Eighteen seniors enrolled in Exploratory Teaching worked with grades three through nine at Burris, Emerson, Riley, and M.H.S.

These students met with their assigned classes everyday for a full year. They spent the first few weeks in observation and then were allowed to teach the class with the instructor looking on. Each six weeks, the teachers evaluated their cadet's work.

Each cadet teacher underwent different experiences and were exposed to problems they will be exposed to when they become teachers themselves.

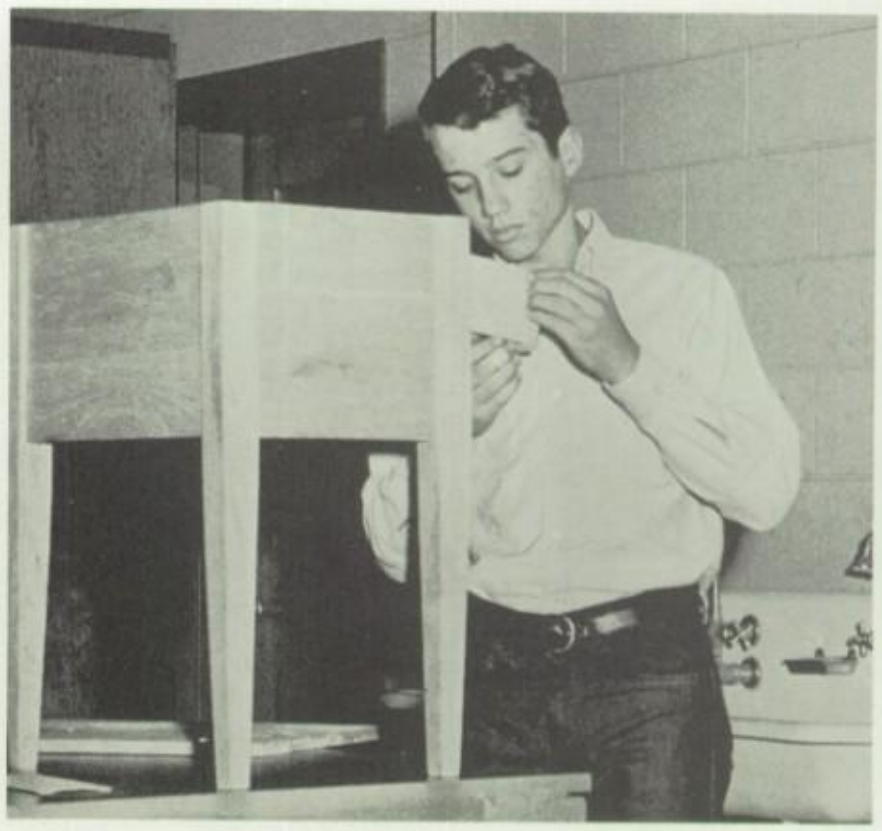
Margie Stroud, Cadet Teacher, explains a problem with the assistance of an overhead.

Cadet teacher, Cindy Acton, assists a Burris Phys Ed class.

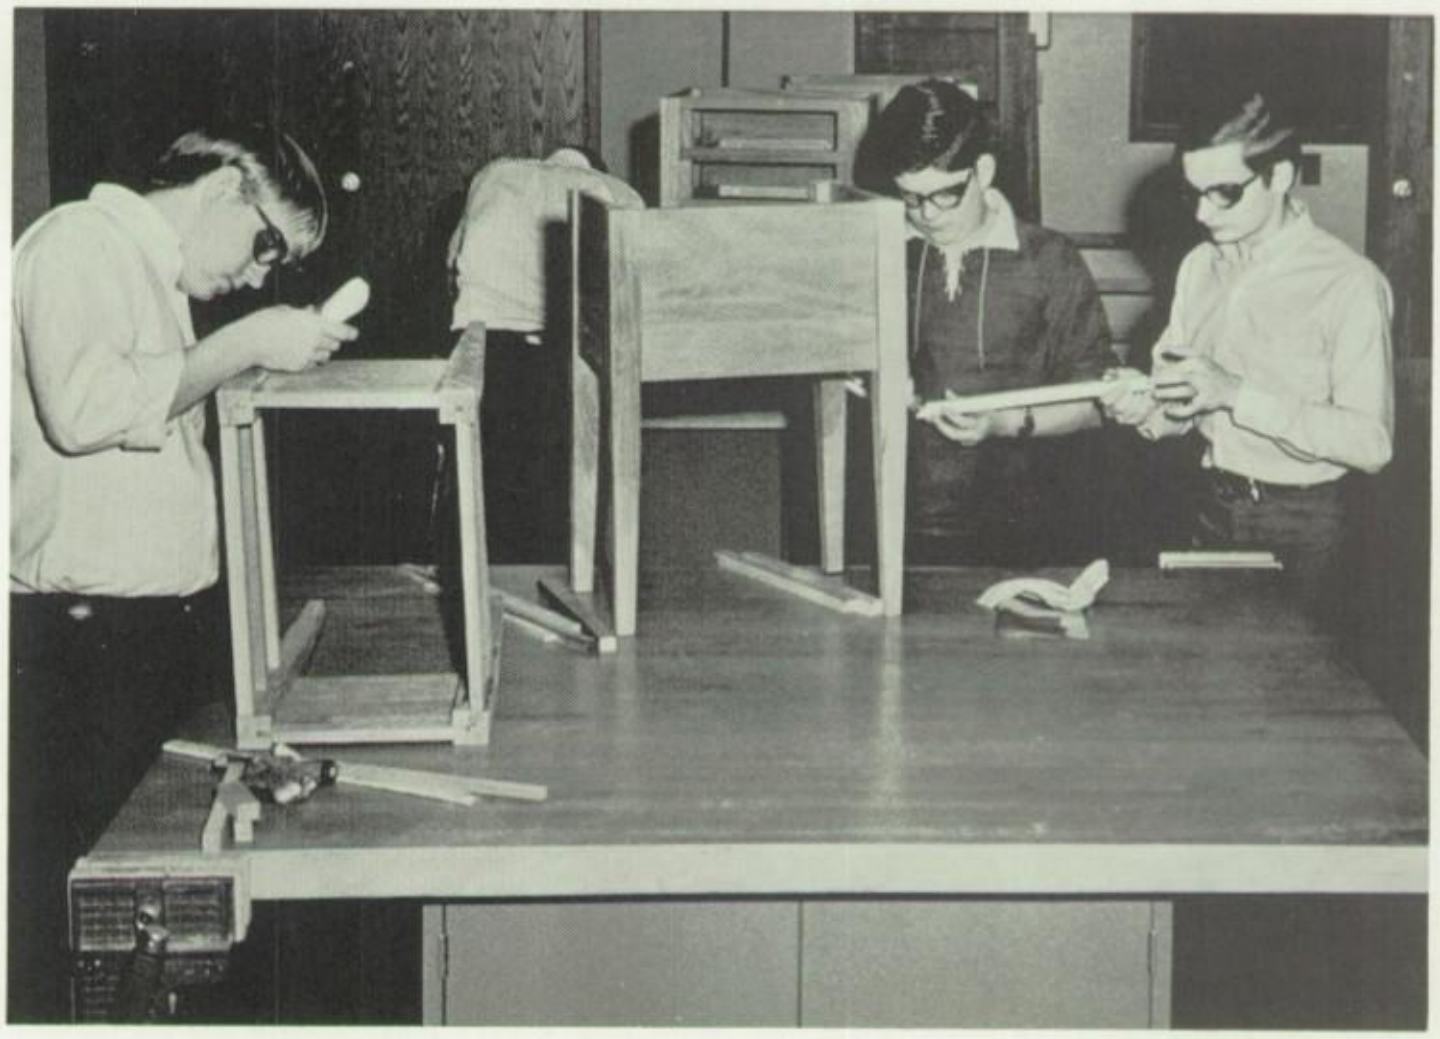
Mrs. Paula Caudell and assistant Cindy Acton instruct the third period Phys. Ed. class at Burris in tumbling.

Boys In The Industrial Arts Department Learn

Joe Kern and Steve Pemberton work energetically to complete their projects in wood shop.

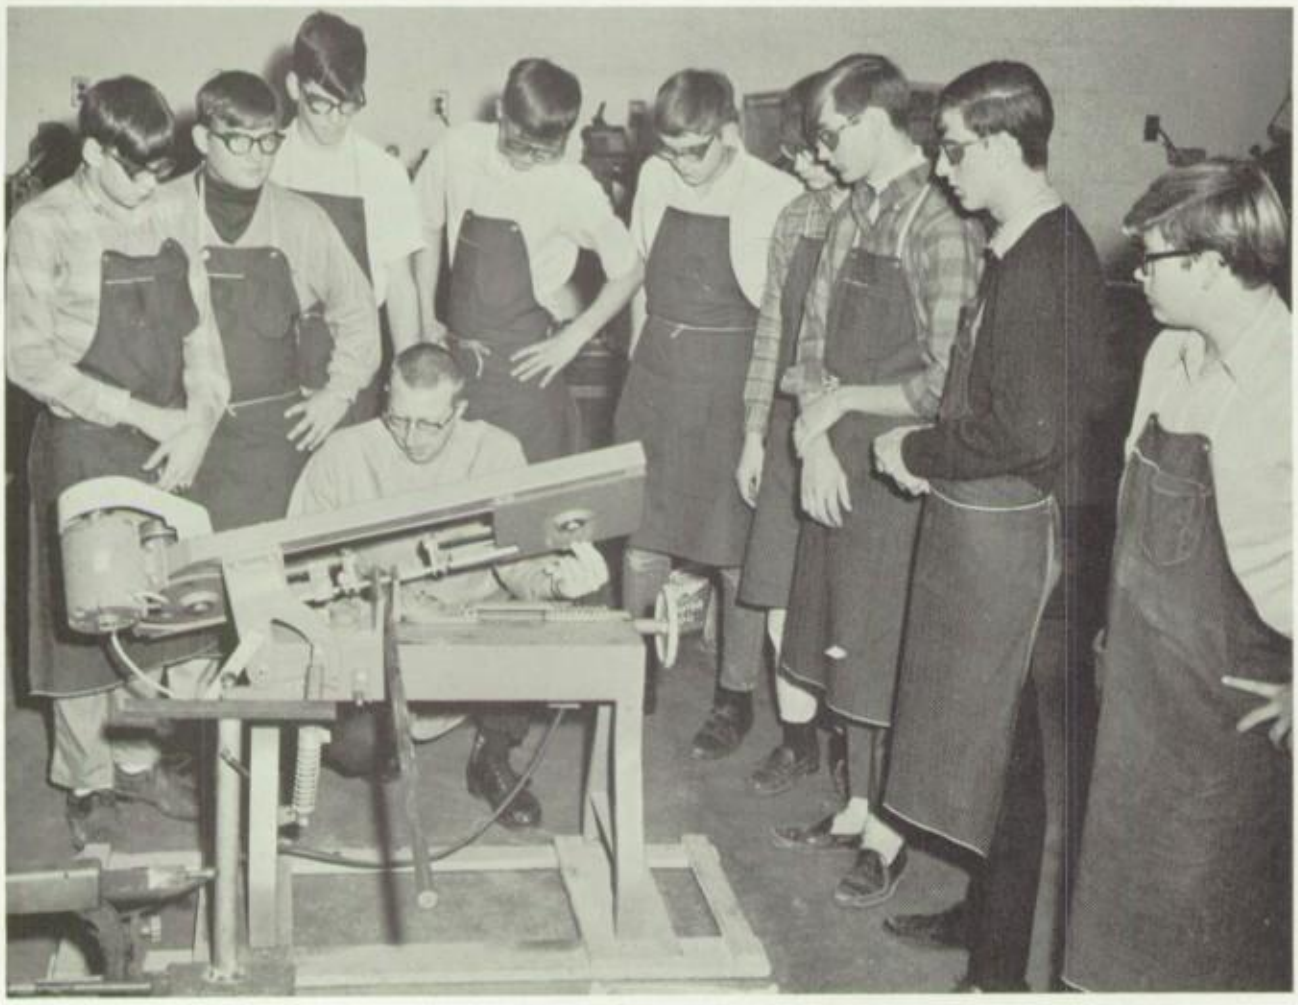


Joe Kern examines a piece of wood for his project before beginning the final assembly.



Ken Spradlin glues the parts of his project together in Mr. Wagoner's fourth period class.

The Art Of Using Tools And Materials Expertly



Mr. Crim demonstrates to his metal shop students the procedures of handling the band saw.

Sophomores Mark King and Mike Rhorer operate a brake in fourth period Metal Shop.

The Industrial Education Department had an enrollment of 115 boys. These boys were required to earn two credits in mechanical drawing as their first course in this department. After this, they could choose a combination or any one of a variety of the following courses: Mechanical Drawing II, Wood I and II, Electricity and Electronics, Metals I and II, Power Mechanics and Technical Math.

These boys learned the basic skills and safe procedures required for making projects successful. After this, they were permitted to further their skills and knowledge through the planning and constructing of more advanced projects of their choosing. These advanced projects accomodated the interests and aptitudes of the various students. The teachers felt this made the Industrial Education courses flexible enough to meet the needs of all students, college bound or otherwise.

Business Students Learn To Be Reliable Office

First year typists practice warm-up exercises under the direction of Mrs. Laura Hays.

An adult typing class listens intently to the instructions of Mrs. Hays.

A wider than ever choice of business courses was offered this year to enable students to prepare themselves in the ever-growing field of commerce. These courses were: Basic Business, Typing, Shorthand, Advanced Secretarial Practice, Bookkeeping, and Business Machines.

Basic Business was required of all incoming freshmen for one semester. By taking this course, students learned the basic fundamentals of business. They were taught the importance of banks in planning savings programs and using a checking account in addition to the facts of insurance programs.

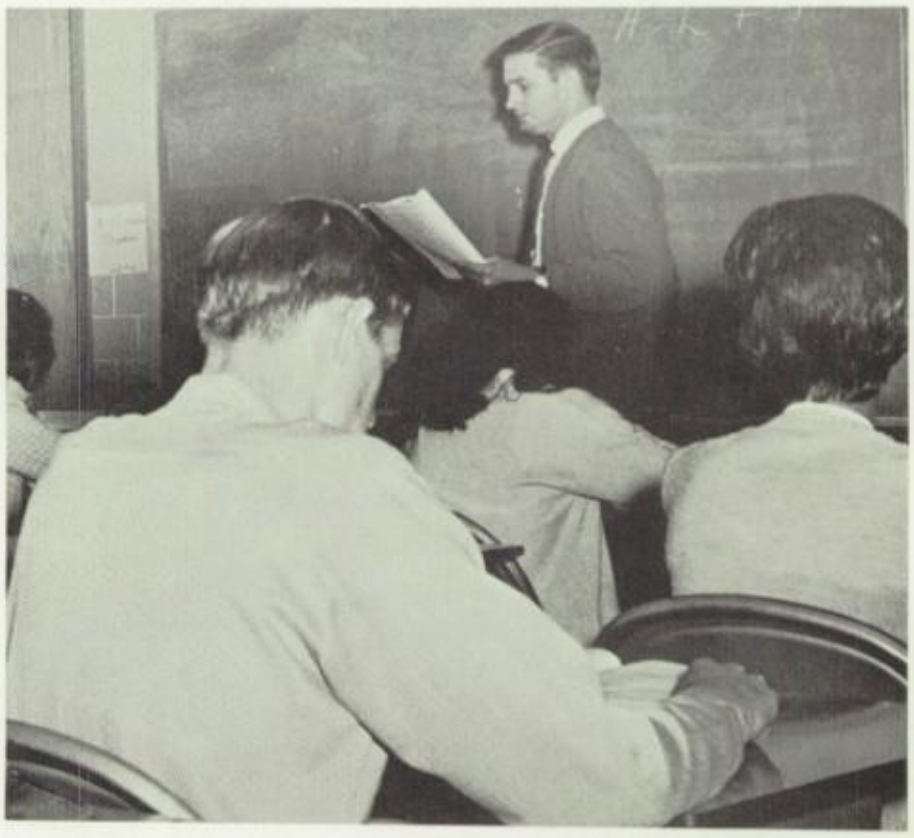
Juniors and seniors were given the opportunity to take typing. After becoming acquainted with the keyboard, they applied their skill to typing letters, tabulation problems, manuscripts, and taking speed timings to improve their speed and accuracy.

Secretarial Practice and Business Machines were offered to all seniors who were eligible to take the advanced courses. Secretarial Practice taught the students proper office procedures and stressed the use of shorthand.

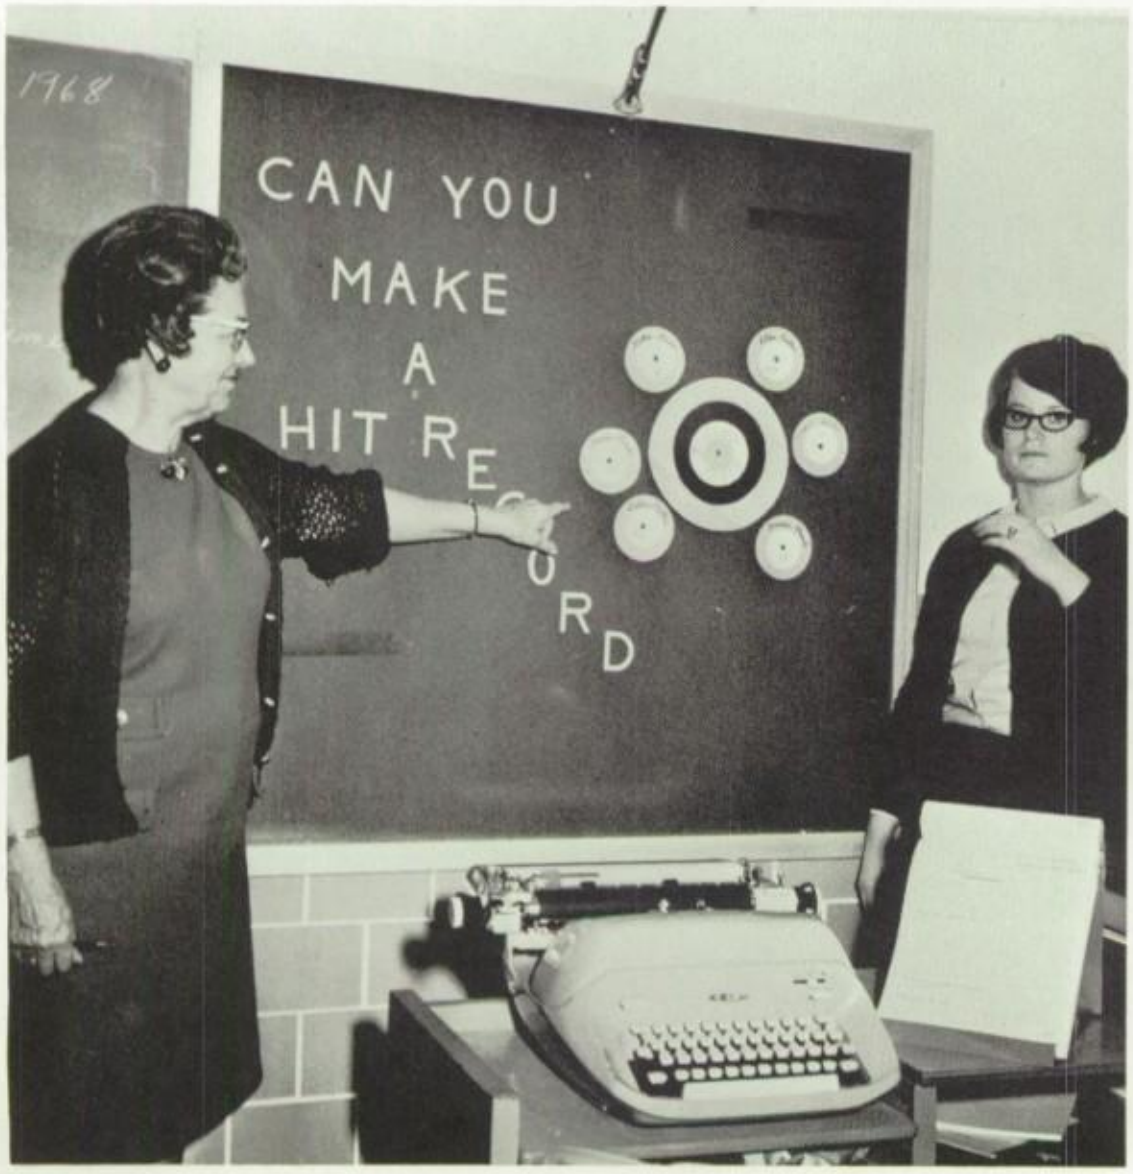
Business Machines was devoted to acquainting students with the many machines used in a modern office. Students learned to manipulate everything from adding machines, printing calculators, and duplicators to more sophisticated devices.

Managers, Capable Secretaries And File Clerks

J. D. Woods checks the accuracy on his gross words per minute after an exam in typing.



Mr. Terry and his studious class go over one of their bookkeeping problems.



Miss Beldon shows Margie Stroud the high speeds attained by her first-year typing classes.

Mr. Terry examines Sondra Foddrill's work in the adult class.

Cooking, Sewing And Homemaking Were Previewed

Debbie Todd completes her cake baking in the second period advanced Home Economics class.

Becky Spradlin and Vicky Smith clean up after finishing a cooking project in Home Ec.

Mrs. Boller demonstrates the art of kneading bread while her students, Susie Beavers and Sue Baker, watch carefully her every movement.

In Mitchell High School's Home Ec. Department

Mrs. Vera Boller shows some of her Freshman Home Economics students how to lay patterns.

Kim Faubion and Cathy Hunsucker press a curtain in Home Ec.

Five courses were offered to Home Ec students this year under the leadership of Mrs. Carolyn Hoggatt and Mrs. Vera Boller.

Home Ec. I and II studied human development, nutrition and principles of food, clothing, and management of time and money.

Family relations, child development, housing and home furnishings and management were the topics discussed in the third year class.

The thirteen senior girls in Home Ec IV studied foods the first semester. The second semester's studies concerned family economics.

The Boys' Home Ec. class studied etiquette, personality development and practiced sewing and cooking.

As the governing body of Mitchell High School, the Student Council became the bridge between the students and the faculty.

The Student Council year started off with the annual football Homecoming. This included a float contest, queen crowning, and dance. The basketball crowning was unique with the outcome being a tie between the freshmen and sophomores.

These were just two of the many projects and convocations sponsored by the Council.

Beta Members Strive To Make Their First Year

Mike Chastain, Dean Stewart, and David Miller sell Mitchell Bluejacket license plates to Mr. Wright, and anyone else they can, in order to earn money so the Beta Club members will be able to attend the State convention held at the Essex House in Indianapolis, Indiana, over the weekend of November 8 and 9.

Thirty-nine students with a 3.25 or above average were installed into the Mitchell Chapter of the National Beta Club on October 17, 1968, with Mrs. Doris Gardin as sponsor.

Although it was a young club, it had a very active year. Twenty-seven members attended the state convention in Indianapolis on November 8th and 9th. At this convention, the club successfully ran Tim Beavers for State President and also earned a certificate for excellent performance when an eight-member singing group participated in the talent contest.

To help finance the trip to the convention, a bake sale and car wash were held. Members also sold Mitchell Bluejacket license plates as an all-year project. At Christmas, each Beta member donated a toy for a needy child in the area.

The Mitchell Beta Club fulfilled its duties as an honorary and a service club throughout the year.

Refreshments are served to new members and their parents at the Beta Club Initiation.

"To create, maintain, and extend throughout the home, school and community high standards of Christian Character" was the purpose of the Mitchell Tri-Hi-Y Club. After inducting 25 new members, the Tri-Hi-Y strived to fulfill its purposes by helping worthy causes: UNICEF, Heart Fund, and Christmas baskets.

Living up to their motto of "pure thoughts, pure words, pure actions," the Tri-Hi-Y donated their services throughout the school year to worthy projects.

In order to make school plays successful, much enthusiasm and ingenuity must top off long hours of practice. Thespians promoted this. To become a Thespian member, students must have had at least ten points, which were issued according to the size of parts played.

This year seventeen students took parts in "The Courtship of Eddie's Father." Plays such as this brought an air of culture into MHS social life and proved to be an asset to school and community.

Bluejackets At All Area Parades And Contests

Long hours of hard work were required to prepare the band for precise marching and twirling in upcoming events; but under the direction of Mr. Robert Arthur, the Mitchell High School Marching Bluejackets participated in several activities during the 1968–69 school year. The members of the band became a familiar sight at football games, basketball games, and parades. These musicians entertained many spectators with their half-time performances.

The last performance of the year was given at Commencement when the band provided the music for the graduation ceremony.

Mitchell's Students Are Kept "Up On Things"

Students and faculty were able to express their opinions in both the Orbit and the school news.

This year's Orbit staff published the school paper tri-weekly. It largely expressed students' views and tried adding humor to this year's paper.

Linda Isom's school news appeared weekly in the Mitchell Tribune and the Bedford Daily Times Mail. On Tuesday, Linda made her rounds at school to get news items before writing her report, having it approved by Mrs. McKinney, and meeting a 5 p.m. deadline each Wednesday.

The school news and the Orbit made M.H.S. life more interesting.

Orbit assembly requires the combined efforts of the staff.

Busy staff members plan the upcoming issue of the Orbit, the school newspaper.

Rick checks with Mrs. McKinney on an Orbit story, while the rest of the staff works on.

The Orbit staff types busily to complete their next issue.

"Stormi, why did I ever let Mr. Oswalt talk me into taking the job of editor this year?"

Staff members perform individual tasks for the next deadline.

Pam Leonard and Susi Hatfield carefully separate and alphabetize underclassmen pictures.

The 52nd edition of the Gold & Blue began last May when the 1969 annual staff was chosen by the co-editors, Stormi Root and Bob Freeman. Four juniors and eleven seniors were selected to make the annual a success. The lucky juniors were selected to serve as understudies and as a possible nucleus for the 1970 yearbook.

Mr. Oswalt's fourth hour class was devoted entirely to the annual. Each staff member was assigned to a copy or layout and was expected to accomplish his job before a given deadline.

During the school year, the staff continued to work diligently during school and after on the yearbook and were relieved to put on the finishing touches just on time, February 17.

Cheerleaders Direct The Newly-formed Pep Club

G.A.A., under the direction of Miss Chastain, met Mondays and Thursdays after school. The object of the organization was to provide extra-curricular activities for all girls who were interested in sports and maintaining physical fitness. The girls participated in such sports as bowling, skating, volleyball, and basketball.

The activities performed by the boys in intramurals, coached by Mr. Hughes, included basketball, volleyball, and dodgeball.

Athletics

The "Backboard Bullies" Of M.H.S. Controlled

Coach Bernie Burke led the Bluejackets through another great season which provided eager fans with excitement.

Our first game was with Seymour. Although we were defeated by the more powerful Seymour team, our spirits were still high. These high spirits led us to a victorious season with a few of our scores reaching into three digit numbers. Scores like these obviously gained the Jackets a reputation for being "Backboard Bullies" which reflected the height advantage the Bluejackets had over the other teams.

Our team this year was one of the toughest teams Mitchell has had, with four of the starting five standing over six feet tall.

M.H.S. Track And Cross Country Teams Strive

Mitchell's track team, taking part in nine events, brought home two first and four second place ribbons. They also did well in the Conference, Seymour Relays, and the Conference Meet.

Cross-country runners ran a busy schedule with seventeen meets. Out of all these, they placed first in three meets, second in four, and third in only one. With several prospective members returning next year, the Jackets should have a most successful season.

Mike Chastain, cross country runner, is among the firsts in the mile run at an away meet.

Mr. Larry Barnes, cross country coach, checks the time of participants during a home meet.

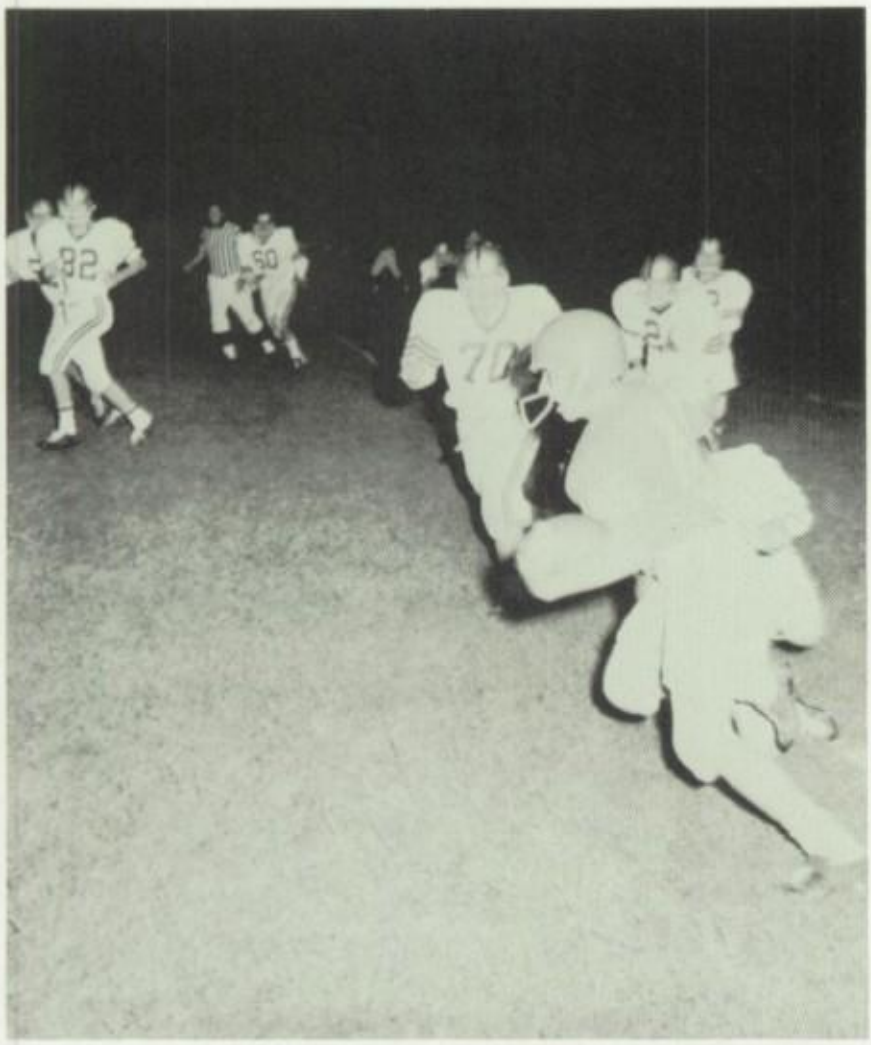
Despite The Hard Practices And Keen Sense Of



Ancient Greeks once said that a fit body helps build a fit mind. This belief seems to be held by Mitchell's football players because it is not uncommon to see the same names which appear on the gridiron roster on the highest distinction list.

To make high grades requires clear thinking. This is also true in playing football, for each player is a small part of a large mass called the "team." He and others must drill with precision to build a well coordinated team—a team which clicks like a machine.

Qualified boys may begin participating in this hard-hitting sport in junior high. As they approach maturity, they may advance through freshman and reserve football. Then they may reach the highest of any athletic career—the varsity team—and all of the responsibility this implies.

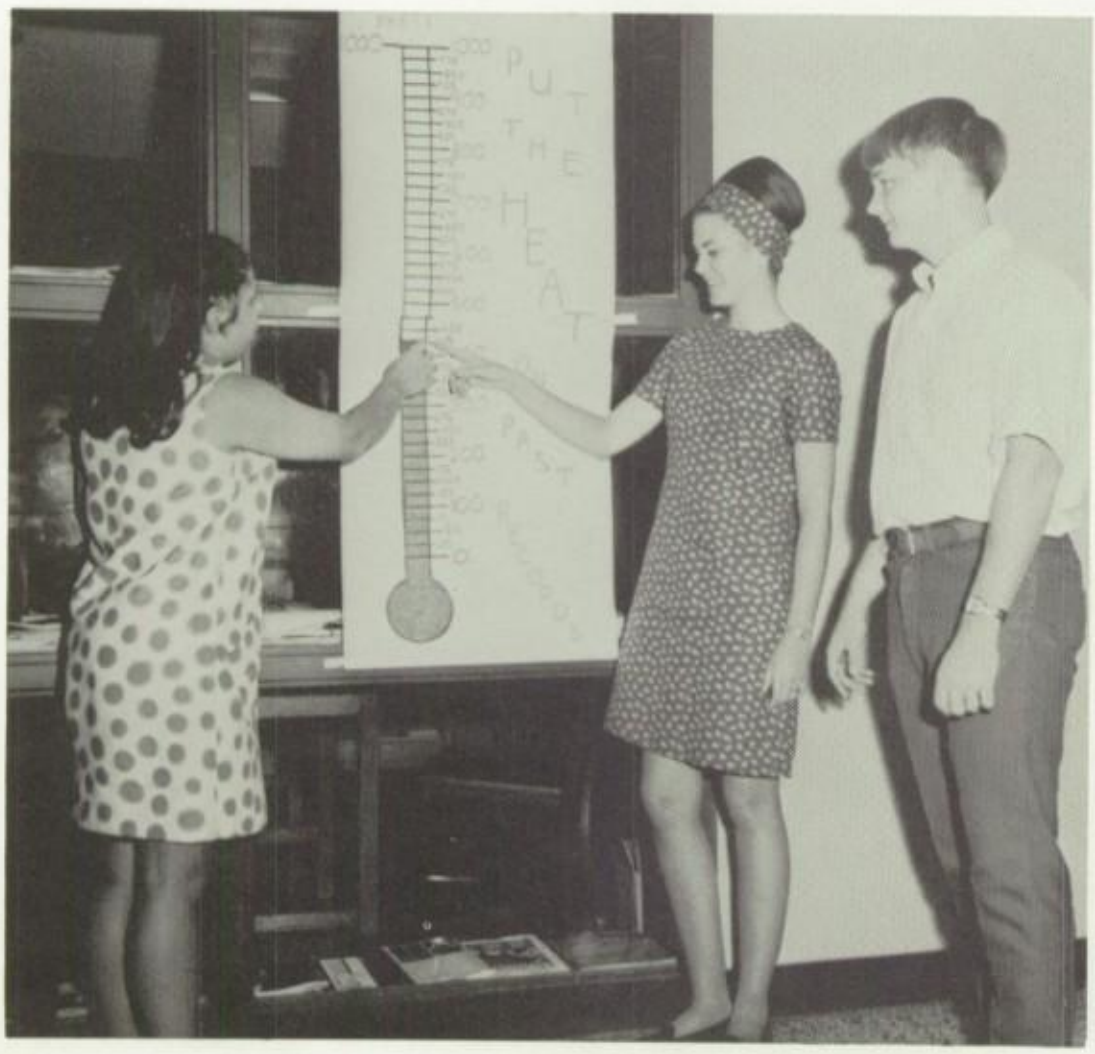
Seniors Find Time For Fun Amid Their Studies

Martin takes time out between classes to examine the clever art work on John's senior cords.



Pam, Susi, and Martin mark the latest total of annuals seniors have sold.

The 1969 Yearbook Staff Signs Out

This cabinet holds the true necessities a staff needs to put out a memorable yearbook.

Acknowledgements

The members of the 1969 Gold and Blue staff would like to take this opportunity to thank the people who helped make possible this 1969 Gold and Blue.

Sincere thanks go to Mr. and Mrs. James Barrett of Barrett Studio, Mr. Jerry Cranny of Paragon Press, the Mitchell Tribune, and school administration, the faculty, and school custodial staff. In addition, we would like to thank photogaphers Jim Williams and Brian Sherwood. Not to be forgotten are Don Mann, Sharon Hawkins, Philip Powell, Steve Chastain, Becky Neal, Jim Williams, Nancy Harrison, and the Tri-Hi-Y officers.

We would like to give special thanks to our two yearbook sponsors, Mr. James Oswalt and Mrs. Marian Claudell.
